IMPERIAL STEAM COOKED HORSE FEED is made of whole corn and oats steam cooked and kiln dried. Most horsemen are convinced of three things before they begin to use Imperial Steam Cooked Horse feed, its SAFETY, HIGH NUTRITIVE VALUE and its HIGH DIGESTIBILITY. It is very high in DIGESTI-BLE NUTRIENTS and is surely PRODUCTIVE OF ENERGY and MUSCLE. INDIGESTION and COLIC are unknown troubles when your horses are fed on this diet. Water less than eight per cent, fiber less than four per cent, carbohydrates seventy-two per cent. It takes about 2,300 pounds of raw grains to make a ton of Imperial Steam Cooked Feed which is put up in one hundred pound sacks, running about one hundred quarts to the bag. It takes three bags to a horse to give it a fair trial and watch results. For sale by

Duro systems can be used with deep wells, shallow wells, cisterns or springs. They may be driven from high line current, farm light plant or gasoline engine.

A Duro system is a sound investment-it lessens labor and promotes health and cleanliness. It replaces drudgery and despair with comfort and happiness. And it is also a permanent improvement that adds to the value of your property.

The Practical Sleeping Porch. (By Katharine Sawin Oakes.) It is said that one must build at leas me house to learn how. The same lictum holds true of eleeping porches Expérience with our first porch taught us many mistakes to avoid in construct ing the second. As the primary need for this arose from the illness of a memfor this arose from the liness of a mem-ber of the family, who for these years lived out of doors, we feel that we under-stand the requisites of the practical sleeping porch. Moreover, nearly every item contributing to the comfort of a patient is equally desirable in an out Program for Week of Sept. 15 door room, used simply for sleeping, or as a family gathering place.

In building a sleeping porch, the first consideration is location. Is more than one location available? If so, which is the least noisy? Has the least noisy the best relation to the interior geography of the house? Most important of all, has it the most favorable exposure? The least favorable exposures would seem to be due north and due south; the first; delightful in summer, bleak and sunless in winter; the second, delightful in winter, and most uncomfortable during the hot weather. Whether an east or a west porch is more desirable depends on lati ude, situation, and prevailing winds. Secondly, one must consider propor tions. These are largely limited, when the house is already built, by its archi-'The Governor's Lady.'

tecture; a first-story plazza decrees the general shape and size of the structure erected above it. However, one may sometimes overcome an apparent obstacle. Our porch was built above a first story affair, 14x7 feet. This lower veranda being at the rear, we ventured to enlarge the upstairs measurements to 15 1-2 by 8 1 2—which means an over-hang of 18 inches on the length, and a inches at each end. In summer, especially, when the woodbine below fills i with softening foliage, this overhang is not unpleasantly noticeable, and it give s considerable extra space. Adequate floor area is most desirable chiefly because it allows choice of posi-tion for the bed or beds. The feet of these should be at least eighteen inches Potash and Perlmutter from the windows—both to allow plenty of clearance, and so that a casual shower may not dampen the coverings. Many people also cannot bear the intense light from the sky beating in their eyes—and this difficulty is obviated if the bed may Mat. 10c and 25c. Evening 15c and 25c. Mat. 10c and 25c. Evening 15c and 25c. President and a still leave plenty of room for passing to and fro.

Another determining factor in allowing choice of position for furniture is the position of the door. The door should be ample in width (so that in severe weather a patient's single bed may be wheeled inside), and should be prefer-ably located at an extremity of the porch, so as to permit unbroken wal

The perch should be as high-studded as possible for two reasons: In summer, the sun beating on a low roof makes the space underneath, open though it be, insufferably hot; and high walls allow large windows, providing better ventilation. The wainscotting, in such case, is also somewhat taller, thereby insuring greater private. greater privacy. The next point to be considered cost. One may reasonably economize in the lumber and interior finish (we did, and don't regret it), but it is unwise to try to save on roofing materials. Where the underneath construction is not first class, shingles do not give an assurance of dry beds. The roof should be, for first choice, of copper or tin; for second choice, of some guaranteed roofing. A covering as impervious as possible to the elements is of particular importance in regions where snow may lie thawing and freezing alternately through a late spring. A tin roof is more comfortable in summer if a layer of felt is placed directly beneath it, to insulate the sun's rays.

One may spend much or little on interior finish. In both our porches the house wall was left unchanged; in the first it was of clapboard, in the second of shingle. Neither is so satisfactory as a pulpboard, laid in panels, would be-for neither is so easily cleaned—and dust and dirt gather quickly out of doors. The three outstanding walls of our present porch we built as cheaply as possible, the wainscotting being finished in heavy canvas, tightly stretched. This is far more satisfactory than the expensive sheathing of our first venture. Sheathing warps and buckles on exposure to dampness and changes of temperature.
The canvas is marked off by strips (board into panels, and directly behind it the windows and screens slip down. This construction sounds inadequate and window and screen casings are simply strips of soft wood, screwed to form channels. They terminate four inches above the sills, to avoid the radius of these when they are lifted back. The window sills are hinged so that they may be folded backward, allowing windows and screens to sink into the wainscot pace. The cleats which form runways or these are, of course, resumed in the sides of the space between wainscot and outer wall, below the sills. This "Pull man's feature, copied from a neighbor's porch, is to our minds invaluable. We
